

A School Health Initiative of the County of San Diego Health and Human Services Agency

HealthLink North County is a school-health focused, public/private partnership to improve health and education outcomes for North San Diego County's school children.

Partners include school nurses, community clinics, local and countywide community-based programs, public health nurses and County Health and Human Services Agency staff.

Activities include bi-monthly meetings featuring informational presentations, opportunities for networking and resource sharing, and an email communication list of over 140 participants.
